CITY TIGHTENS RULES FOR HISTORIC REMODELS

New regulations imposed by the city will make it more likely that extensive environmental review will be required before exterior remodeling or demolition of older homes. The rules apply to hundreds of Carmel structures, including the decrepit Genthe house which is for sale on Camino Real (above) and a Lincoln Street retail building that is proposed for demolition.

By TAMARA GRIPPI

HOMEOWNERS WHO breathed a sigh of relief after the Carmel City Council turned down a moratorium on alterations to homes built before 1950 are now paying close attention to a new set of rules the city has introduced for historic, potentially historic and simply old Carmel homes.

The new "protocols" — written by the Carmel planning staff — add more hoops for property owners to jump through before they can remodel or tear down houses.

Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth said at a planning commission meeting April 28 that the policies will "mean more expense and time for many property owners, but it's the only way we could find to comply with CEQA (California Environmental Quality Act)."

City officials learned a year ago that Carmel's historic ordinance conflicts with state environmental laws. While work has already begun on a replacement ordinance, officials say they need to "play it safe" while a citywide environmental impact report is prepared.

"If there is an allegation of historic value we are obliged to treat it (the house) as historic until proven otherwise," said Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

The city's move comes after a 1997 California appeals court decision that the City of Oakland could not tear down an

SUNSET THEATER PROJECT UPDATE

Carmel prepares to certify EIR, borrow initial $5 million

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THE CITY of Carmel is pushing ahead with the renovation of Sunset Center, and is prepared to go into debt for its $5 million share of the $16 million project.

That information was part of an extensive press briefing about the next phase of the Sunset Theater project by City Administrator Jere Kersnar on April 28.

The city just paid off the final $428,000 install-

City wants shops not too big, not too small

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BIG STORES in Carmel might run into big trouble.

In a move that may be a response to the possibility of Longs moving into the large vacant building on Dolores and Seventh, the Carmel Planning Commission is considering a new ordinance to limit the floor space of retail stores to no more than 5,000 square feet. The zoning change would affect new buildings and modifications to existing ones, including the 6,000-square-foot vacant building considered by Longs.

Local architect John Thodos questioned the commission's motivation for the size limit. "I'm just wondering: Is this a reaction to the rumor of Longs coming into the city?" he asked.

Commission Chair Janice Fisher denied the rumor was a factor, saying she has been working on a whole range of zoning changes, including a potential size limit for retail stores in Carmel for almost a year. "We have received various recommendations from Mel Kline's Business District Advisory Committee in many matters relating to the business district," she said.

But Thodos questioned the apparent urgency of the ordinance. He said, "It appears to be a knee-jerk reaction to the rumor that Longs is coming into Carmel. I see no evidence that

Alleged cat killers held in custody

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO HUSKIES on the loose killed a Carmel cat before eluding authorities for hours April 28. "Yvette" and "Knick" are the same Siberian huskies accused of killing cats in their Carmel Highlands neighborhood, allegations that landed them in court twice last summer.

"They said that the charges against them were never proven, and that they had no knowledge that the dogs were vicious," said Carmel Police Department (CPD) Lt. Bill Uretsky of the dogs' owners. "They said they were very sorry."

Uretsky finally cornered the runaway dogs in a private yard near Camino Real and 10th Wednesday afternoon, and hauled them in. Both dogs were blood-stained, according to Uretsky. "One had blood all over its face."

The attack

Susan Koza, who works in the Sunset Center office of the Monterey Symphony, looked out her window to see two huskies attacking a cat. "We could hear sounds of animals fighting," she said. "It looked horrible."

Koza said she ran down onto Mission Street to chase the dogs away, and the cat was able to crawl under a car. But the huskies returned, she said, and a co-worker ran them off again. Koza called police.

ment on a big park land loan and freeing up that money would allow Carmel to finance its share of the Sunset renovation, according to Kersnar.

The remaining $11.65 million would be financed through private donations, according to Nancy Doolittle of the non-profit fundraising group Sunset Center for the Arts.

The arts group has contracted with

Ketchum, Inc.—the firm that conducted a fund raising feasibility study last year, retaining its services to organize and manage the fund raising campaign. The firm has opened an office at Dolores and Eighth.

Need EIR green light

At a special meeting of the city council April 29, Kersnar briefed the community on what needs to be done to get a green light on the extensive renovation project which was proposed seven years ago and which has stirred spirited debate in Carmel ever since. The final Environmental Impact Report must be certified before any serious fundraising can begin.

Kersnar presented both Planning Commission and Building Committee recommendations at the special meeting. The committee, charged with evaluating renovation options and financing plans, is made up of Mayor Ken White, Council member Sue McCloud, Kersnar, City Attorney Don Freeman and four members of the Sunset Center for the Arts — Doolittle, Davis Factor, Richard Borda and Alan Brenner.

The revised plan and EIR addendum were reviewed over the past months by the Historic Preservation Committee and three commissions — Forest and Beach, Planning and Community and Cultural.

As well as recommending endorsement of the final EIR with its addendum, the Building Committee recommended that the city council endorse a Master Plan for the theater project, using the Adaptive Reuse Plan alternative as its basis, while adding three major elements, each the subject of community concern:

- a stage-right extension about 9 feet towards Mission Street. Neighbors complained about an earlier plan to extend 16 feet.

- a community/multi-use room
- a landscaping/parking solution.

Brian Roseth, director of Community Planning and Building, summarized significant environmental impacts from the project. A staff report concluded that of all the alternatives studied, the Adaptive Reuse Plan achieves the most objectives at reasonable cost with least environmental damage.

Roseth indicated that although significant impacts will result from this alternative, the overall benefits to the community outweigh its drawbacks.

Additional costs

In addition to renovating Sunset Theater, it has been determined that work needed outside the footprint of the theater would have to be done at the same. This work includes extending the new roof over the entire building, installing a single security alarm system and extending electrical and mechanical systems throughout the structure.

Davis Landon Adamson, the firm retained to serve as project manager, estimates these additional costs at $850,000. This added to the $15.5 million cost estimate for the basic project plus $300,000 for the stage-right extension, total $16.65 million.

Dump trucks on parade from Junipero and 4th

THE CARMEL Public Works Dept. warns local motorists that the excavation of the NW corner of Junipero and Fourth to make way for the underground garage at the "Viejo Carmel" project has begun. The top 10 feet of soil on the entire lot will have to be excavated and trucked out of town during the next three weeks. If you can avoid the area, do.

ZONING

Commissioner Robin Wilson, who has been working on zoning issues with Fisher, said the revisions were not derived in a vacuum. "We have tried very hard to involve other interested parties, such as the business group here in town," he said. "This is not urgency; this is efficiency."

Thodos also questioned the selection of 5,000 square feet as the limit. Planning Director Brian Roseth said the number was selected based on the fact that most of the properties in the central commercial district are subdivided into 25-foot lots, or 2,500 square feet. "Any number that you pick is going to be to some extent an arbitrary number," he responded. "The idea of having a limit has been talked about for some time."

Kline said his committee is concerned about chain stores, but he doubted that more than a few of them are even large enough to accommodate a big chain. "I think we should do some kind of inventory of sizes of current stores," he told the commission. "I think only one or two would be outside [the limit]."

The ordinance will come before the commission after it has been reviewed by Kline's committee, according to Planner Mary Bilse. Kline said he knew very little about the proposed ordinance. "It just came out of the blue yesterday," Kline told The Pine Cone. "I think it's very much in its infancy."

During his committee's meeting May 5, Kline will solicit help to inventory the number of businesses larger than 5,000 square feet. "Remember there are potentially more because some buildings have four, five, eight, nine shops, and could easily reconfigure" into a much larger space, he told the commission.

Wilson responded, "That's exactly what this ordinance would prevent."

abandoned Montgomery Ward department store without first preparing an EIR to analyze the building's historic importance.

Carmel's new policies, which have apparently just gone into effect, specify that:

- an environmental impact report be prepared before any of the 180 homes listed as "significant" on the city's historic inventory can be demolished. (Up until now, an initial study was the minimum requirement.)

- an expert in historic preservation prepare a California Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) historic home report before the exterior of any home on the historic list can be remodeled. Carmel architects and builders estimated that preparation of such forms cost between $600 and $1,000.

- a professional must also determine whether exterior alterations for homes on the historic inventory comply with standards promulgated by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior.

- DPR forms must also be completed for any buildings listed as "notable" on the city's inventory. Those forms will then be reviewed by the historic preservation committee.

- homes built before 1950 that haven't yet been surveyed will also require DPR forms.

'An insult'

Some local architects and builders in town worried that the new policies would stymie projects and put an unnecessary burden on the homeowners.

"This policy is very close to what the council voted not to bring forward as an emergency measure," said Carmel architect John Thodos. "This is an insult to our citizens, elected officials and the planning department."

Some questioned whether the EIR requirement was necessary. "An EIR is an expensive process, it shouldn't be required for anything other than an extremely significant house," said Carmel architect Robert Carver.

Others wondered whether all the homes on the city's inventory are truly significant. "They just created this list without a great deal of study by professionals," said Carmel designer John Mandurrago.

Mandurrago hired a private consultant to examine the home he hopes to demolish — which is currently on the city's candidate list. While the consultant determined that the house wasn't significant, city officials are requiring Mandurrago to do an EIR because the city received conflicting information, he said.

Carmel builder Chris Tescher said he was pleased that the city would allow property owners to provide their own DPR forms, but he questioned whether they should be required.

"I'm delighted that the planning department is open-minded enough to allow people to bring in information," Tescher said. "As a requirement I find it very restrictive. The burden of the historic preservation process is falling on the property owners more than on the city."

Not onerous

Carver pointed out that requiring new DPR forms could be helpful. "It's not exactly onerous," he said. "It's nothing like an EIR. As far as people being required to fill out the form, it's a good idea. It could fill in some of the holes in the existing survey."

Ironically DPR forms have already been filled out — by volunteers with the Carmel Preservation Foundation — for all the properties identified as significant. However some of the information on those forms has been questioned by property owners.

Tescher and his partners, who are working on a project to expand the Cypress Inn, hired their own preservation consultant, Kent Seavey, to evaluate the historic value of the Morgan Building, which they hope to tear down.

In contrast to the "ambiguous" report from the foundation, Seavey concluded that the building "had no historic value," Tescher said. And the historic preservation committee just recently accepted Seavey's report, paving the way for the building to be torn down.

History unknown

Residents who live in the Northeast Neighbors territory — including the streets from Ocean Avenue to the northern and eastern city limits — will also be impacted by the new policies.

Since many of the homes haven't yet been surveyed, the homeowners will have to pay for a preservation expert to fill out a DPR form if their house was built before 1950.

Noel Van Bibber, who is president of the Northeast Neighbors, said the new procedure will probably be a good safety measure.

"If we don't require owners to do the paperwork, a lot can slip through the cracks," Van Bibber said. "There's a lot of history up here on the hill."

But he cautioned against procedures that are too "complicated and costly" for the property owners.

FINGERPRINTING NEVER BEEN EASIER IN CARMEL

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WHEN IT comes to fingerprinting employees, Carmel is all set to enter the 21st Century. The city plans to update its fingerprinting system and ditch the old ink pads in favor of new electronic technology provided by Monterey County.

At the May 4 meeting, the Carmel City Council will decide whether to adopt the new procedure that would dramatically speed up the results of routine background checks on new employees.

The current system "takes weeks and weeks — longer than we can afford to wait with new employees," said Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar. The city currently mails paper cards marked with ink fingerprints to Sacramento for processing.

The new system will allow Carmel's future employees to keep their hands clean while the unique patterns of their fingers are recorded by an electric sensor. The results will then be sent by computer to Sacramento and cross-referenced by the state's databank.

Kersnar hopes that the new system will help avoid "awkward situations" where employees are already working before their background checks have been completed.

Running with the big dogs

By MARY BROWNFIELD

UNINTIMIDATED BY international competition and racing around the track close to the speed of sound, some local guys will duke it out in the highly competitive AMA superbike races at Laguna Seca this weekend.

"I got into it because I was riding on the street and I got tired of out-running the highway patrol," said racer Dave Wasson. "I used to hang out with a lot of guys and go on rides every weekend, and invariably there were always problems with different forms of Johnny Law."

Wasson, who lives in Hidden Hills with a view of the track from his deck, started racing in the summer of 1991. He got bitten by the bug after a friend encouraged him to take a two-day California Superbike School at Laguna Seca. There, Wasson learned to utilize a talent he knew he already had: he was fast.

"My first street bike was a Yamaha FZ600," he said. "I ran off a road in Pebble Beach and ran head-on into a tree."

After recovering from injuries that included a fractured skull, Wasson bought another motorcycle and continued riding on the street, until friends' fatalities stopped him, he said.

"A couple of people I know were killed in street accidents and that made me quit for a while."

Then he discovered racing. A month after completing track school, Wasson raced a Yamaha FZR600 against a number of fellow novice riders in an American Federation of Motorcyclists (AFM) event. The AFM is an amateur racing organization whose members compete at tracks throughout California.

Tough competition

This year, Wasson is riding a 1997 Suzuki GSXR600 in AMA 600 SuperSport. The class mandates that only street-legal modifications can be made to the motorcycles, such as changes in shocks, tires, exhaust, hardware and body work. Changes to the inside of the engine and computer telemetry are illegal.

"What they're trying to do is keep costs down so average Joes can race with factory guys," he said. "It just makes cheating much more expensive."

The discrepancy between factory riders (Yamaha team's

His goal is to finish within the top 15. If that doesn't sound like a lofty enough ambition, consider the competition, he says. "People might say finishing 20th sucks, but they have no idea the amount of talent we're up against out there," he said.

According to Wasson, finishing 20th behind 15 factory riders is more like finishing fifth — the factory riders, with their honed skills, full-time racing and "tuning secrets," run a race faster than any privateer.

Racing against cancer

This year Wasson is racing on a team, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, called TRACK — Team Race Against Cancer for Kids. Local racer Joe Cabbage invited him to join the team, whose race bikes sport graphics of a gray, toothy shark.

Cabbage said he chose the shark because those creatures do not get cancer and their cartilage is used to fight the disease. That, and the graphics are eye-catching. Dubbed the "Cancer Killer," Cabbage's 1993 Yamaha TZ250 attracts the kids he is trying to reach with his anti-tobacco message.

"The kids love it — they come up and see the shark, and we let them sit on it," he said. He also hands out tobacco education literature. "The bike is a tool that captures their attention."

BETTER LOOK AROUND; YOU'RE BEING WATCHED

Coffee Break

By Beverly Borgman

IF YOU'RE a tourist picking up the Carmel Pine Cone for the very first time, better look around. You're being watched.

Not in the normal sense of the word. Jim Rockford isn't standing in front of the Carmel Drug Store, hidden behind dark glasses. Nor is Peter, my retired CIA friend, snapping your picture with his micro-camera.

Still, your every move is being scrutinized, from the tax you pay on your motel room to the number of times you visit the aquarium, to the restaurants you prefer for dinner.

Like so many of our institutions, including love and marriage, tourism on the Monterey Peninsula is being observed, counted and duly recorded. When computers soon spit out the latest figures on your likes and dislikes, local businesses will adjust accordingly, hopeful for improved profits.

Touring

It all makes me wonder: When did touring become tourism? When did a ride in the country, with a stop at a general store for an ice cold orange Nehi, become a business? Was it the general store's genial old proprietor who said to his wife, "You know, Mother, I think maybe we should start putting a few chairs out on the front porch."

Touring, when I was a kid, rarely meant an overnight stay. Like the little ball attached by a rubber band to a wooden paddle, our small Willys sedan ventured out only so far, then bounced back to our modest house in Los Angeles by dark.

The trips were usually inspired by my grandfather who didn't drive, but who had a penchant for looking at "land" out in the desert. It fell to his son-in-law, my father, to do the chauffeuring. I was usually wedged firmly between my chubby grandma and my skinny grandpa in the back seat. Air conditioning? Never heard of it.

When nickels for soda pop were in short supply, we had our big aluminum thermos. I still have the most wonderful sensual memory of drinking icy water from the dented silver cup that screwed onto the top of the jug.

Mama's story

My mother loved to tell the story of earlier days in her marriage when my dad was driving a truck for the Southern Pacific Railroad in Los Angeles. A coffin (occupied) came in on a train from the east and would surely be late for its own funeral if it wasn't delivered to El Monte in a hurry. My father was assigned the errand.

It was a lovely spring day, and my folks' house was right on the route to El Monte. With the coffin clearly in view on the back of his flatbed truck, Erle stopped at home and asked Ruby if she'd like to go for a ride. Oh, would she!

The deceased got to his funeral on time, my mother had a lovely outing among the orange blossoms, and no one at the railroad office was ever the wiser.

Tourism

Now that was touring. Today we're talking tourism.

Don't you think it's interesting that the Monterey County Travel and Tourism Alliance hired a firm from Salt Lake City to survey peninsula tourism? I do hope the Utah visitors will think to ask themselves the same questions they ask our other visitors.

Because to paraphrase a song from my father's era, "How you gonna keep 'em up in Salt Lake after they've seen Carmel?"

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

It's estimated that four out of five older people have at least one chronic health disorder. Pain and reduced ability to function normally make them vulnerable to promises of an easy cure. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warns against falling for what it calls "unproven medical treatments." It's not just a matter of squandering money on futile "cures." The FDA points out that turning to quackery can worsen one's health. A cancer patient who falls for a "miracle cure" risks allowing the disease to worsen past the point at which conventional treatments can help control the effects.

Myra Rosenbloom, 74, has been crusading since 1992, when her husband died in a Munster, Indiana hospital. Taken there after a heart attack, he had another attack three days later. But, Mrs. Rosenbloom says, no doctor was on duty that night. A nurse summoned one who was "on call." By the time he arrived more than 90 minutes later, Rosenbloom was dead. Since then, Mrs. Rosenbloom has devoted full time to crusading for laws to require hospitals with 100 beds or more to have at least one doctor on duty at any time. In 1996, barred from the Indiana state house, she was jailed for trespassing. She immediately rallied other prisoners to demonstrate loudly for her cause. Charges were dropped and she was released in a few hours.

Carmel volunteers work to change lives of 'desperate children in Eden'

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL VOLUNTEERS who work with foster kids say they have encountered "a different universe" within the county — a Monterey Peninsula where children can live their entire lives and never see the ocean.

Locals who serve as Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASAs) for children who are dependents of the courts spend several hours a week showing the kids there is "one person they can trust."

The CASA volunteers are entrusted to speak out for the best interests of the children in court. The CASA program was founded in 1977 by Seattle Judge David Soukup who was frustrated that he had to find homes for children without knowing much more than their names.

The CASA volunteers attempt to fill in that gap — and do much more in the process. Each CASA commits to spending three to five hours a week with one child for an 18-month period.

For many kids, their CASA volunteer is the first stable adult who's ever been a part of their lives.

"By the time we get the children, they've already gone through three foster homes and dealt with one or two law enforcement officers," said Rosalie Ferrante, executive director of CASA in Monterey County. "Our role is the only constant they will ever know."

"Imagine what it would be like to be pulled out of your home, out of your bedroom, out of the only security you've ever known and be taken away by a police officer," said Carmel CASA David Maradei, who also serves as administrative director of the non-profit organization.

After being taken away from homes where they've been abused or neglected, the children face a world where the odds are stacked against them. Under the current system, 80 percent of the kids become delinquents, Ferrante said.

And then, when the children are "emancipated" at age 18, many of them have no skills and no clue about how to survive on their own. Sadly, a high number of the children become homeless or end up in prison.

"Of the people incarcerated in prison, 76 percent were child delinquents," Ferrante said. "When the CASAs are involved nationwide, less than 10 percent go into delinquency. Our goal is to shut down every damn prison across the U.S."

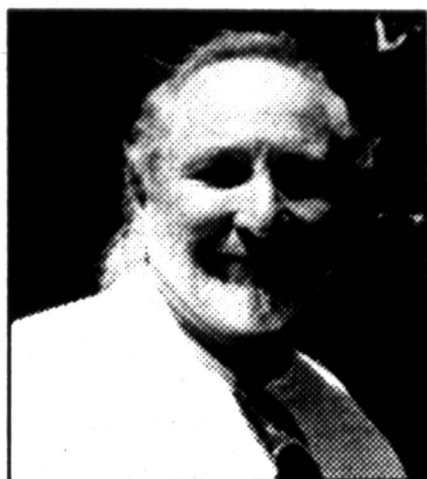

How to spell love?

But each CASA's job is immense — reaching out to children who are used to a system where everything is temporary, kids who believe that the only people who pay attention are those who get paid.

In fact, the first question a child will ask their CASA volunteer is, "Are you paid?"

As soon as the CASA tells the child, "No, I'm not," their credibility goes up 100 percent in the child's eyes," Maradei said.

The CASAs take training classes to learn how to build trust with the children, but they know that the process of getting through to a child is really quite simple.

"The way a child spells love is T-I-M-E," Maradei said. "The time you spend, they translate as love and consistency."

Maradei tells of a boy who doesn't remember the last time he saw his parents. The boy's story is pretty typical: His father is in jail and his mother is in a drug rehabilitation center in Los Angeles.

The teenager is one of 75 youngsters whose case is being handled by a sole social worker. He's about to be moved out of the group home where he's been living and has no idea where he will end up.

Two months ago he was lucky enough to be paired with a CASA. "We need male volunteers so desperately because they show up and are consistent," Ferrante said. "The children have no role models whatsoever."

The children's future hangs in the balance. "The kids have all the potential to do good or bad," said Carmel CASA Perry

Walker. "They can go either way."

'Where is our CASA?'

But the CASAs are often pleasantly surprised at the difference a few hours a week can make in the children's lives.

One local volunteer who became the CASA for a girl in a group home quickly learned how important her visits were. "By the fourth week, there was a clamor in the group home," Maradei said. "The other girls asked, 'where is our CASA? Where is the person who is going to befriend us?'"

Maradei wishes the local chapter had enough volunteers to serve all the dependent children in the county. So far there are 46 CASAs in Monterey County and more than 500 youths in dependency. "There are very desperate kids in Eden — right here in Monterey County," Walker said.

Perry and Maradei say they were moved to become CASAs because they couldn't think of more rewarding work than helping out a child.

"If you're going to give time, what you want to do is impact a child," Walker said. "It has the greatest potential that I've seen."

Healthy looking pine snaps in two, crushing Carmel couple's car

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL RESIDENTS Paul Druhan and Peggy Hoff were glad they weren't home to hear the snap of the 80-foot pine tree just before a 20-foot section came crashing down on their Carpenter Street home and car April 22.

The couple say that their car — which is currently buried beneath pine cone-laden branches — will probably never run again. The impact dented the hood, damaged the engine and even blew out the car's back windows.

In addition, the Monterey pine took out a corner of the house. While four other trees have died near Druhan and Hoff's home within the last couple of years, the couple was surprised to see this one break in two. "It's green and it smells like pine," Hoff said. "There's nothing dead about this tree."

The heavy winds that whipped through Carmel late last week probably snapped the tree in half, Druhan said. The National Weather Service reported winds measuring as high as 36 miles an hour at the Monterey Airport April 22.

"There is certainly the possibility that it was much gustier in exposed areas — depending on where you were," said Jim Carroll, meteorologist with the service.

The weather service predicts only mild winds beginning April 30, with estimates ranging from 15 to 20 miles per hour.

Hoff and Druhan are simply thankful that their old car was sitting in their driveway instead of their new Volvo, and that they weren't in it.

"How much time would you have to get out of the way?" Druhan wondered.

It's in your hands

THE FOUNDERS of Carmel-by-the-Sea had no Guidelines For Inventing a Unique Village to follow. They created the town without the benefit of scientific studies, a building code or a single environmental impact report.

In fact, the very attributes that Carmelites cherish so dearly are inseparable from the spontaneous and unregulated expressions of the founders' values — their love of nature, their self-reliance, ingenuity and resourcefulness, and their desire to live simple, artistic lives away from the chaos of the big cities.

In more recent times, the dominant individualism that characterized the early years of Carmel's existence has been replaced by almost total reliance on the law as Municipal Savior. A whole generation has grown up with the idea that the sole way to deal with any perceived threat to the town's "character" is to pass a law making the threatening act illegal.

This approach works reasonably well when applied in broad strokes. Building height and coverage limits, for example, are an absolute must. So are zones restricting categories of land uses to certain parts of town — commercial here, residential there, and the like.

But an attempt to control the minutiae of human behavior or expression is doomed to fail. And the tendency to pass more laws every year sometimes produces weird results — as we are now seeing.

Consider, for example, the municipal effort to set an exact count for the number of jewelry stores, restaurants and souvenir shops permitted in town. And the control of precisely what types of food are permitted in certain food outlets.

The latter provision resulted in a long-time, beloved Carmel resident being denied the ability to sell soup in his coffee house — a silly result which the wisdom of the people, given the opportunity, will surely overturn.

The exact count and strict regulation of the size of souvenir shops succeeded in preventing the Pebble Beach Company from opening a store on Ocean Avenue. But instead Carmel will soon get a Phoenix-based souvenir clothing chain called Sergeant Leisure and another art gallery. Was this tradeoff really a victory for the people of Carmel?

A few weeks ago Carmelites learned that the hugely successful Longs Drugs chain was considering opening a store downtown. On the surface, this appears to be another insensitive corporate move — one which would despoil the town's serenity.

But the building's owners rightly pointed out that they have to rent to someone — a fiscal necessity which becomes more and more difficult as the list of permissible businesses shrinks.

The president of Longs Drugs told this newspaper that he "loves Carmel" and has greatly enjoyed his yearly vacations in town. Accordingly he should heed the concerns of the people of Carmel and withdraw his effort to open a store here.

But that would be a very short-lived victory for Carmel, because the former bank building at Dolores and Seventh would still need a tenant. The Gap and Victoria's Secret can't be far behind.

We think the solution is not only to restrict what can be done, but to encourage what should be done.

The government really can't do that.

But the people can.

Anyone who cares about Carmel's future — and in particular the people who signed the petition against Longs — should demonstrate their concern by renewing their commitment to patronize local businesses.

No store can stay open because of empty expressions of public support. In the long run Carmel will get the businesses its citizens are willing to pay for.

Wrong priorities

Dear Editor:

I was struck by the juxtaposition of two front-page stories in last week's issue of The Pine Cone: the petition drive against Longs Drugs in downtown Carmel and the marijuana problem in Carmel Middle School.

So long as our attention to vital issues is monopolized by the preservation of our past — Longs, wood-framed windows, no external changes to "historic" homes, a ban on tree cutting, etc. — we should not be surprised when our future — in this case our children — shows problems resulting from our priorities.

And when we rely on a former mayor to wipe out debt for park land that we might tax ourselves (perish the thought!) to pay, we might question if our economic priorities are in tune with our well-known and obvious wealth — again, notably, with reference to our schools.

W.T. Lundell, Big Sur

Longs would be 'an asset to the community'

Dear Editor:

In response to your article concerning the proposed installation of a Longs Drug Store in Carmel we have discussed this issue with our friends and the majority feeling is unanimous: the community, which is largely an older population, would welcome the addition of a Longs Drug Store in Carmel downtown. Many of us do not drive and the access to a wide-range, lower-cost drug and sundry store within walking distance would be a much appreciated blessing. Longs is known for good value, high quality and service at lower prices. This should be viewed in its proper light — as an asset to the community. I think if the merchants of Carmel who expressed concern in your article would shift

Children helping children through a nightmare

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TAKING SOME of the terror out of the investigation of child abuse is the goal of the new Sally P. Archer Child Advocacy Center, dedicated to the memory of the former Pebble Beach resident and decorated by All Saints' Day School children April 22.

The goal of the Child Abuse Response Team (CART) is to make the interview process as painless as possible for the child.

"We discovered over the years that a combined approach to cases of child abuse was best for the children — that being reinterviewed by the district attorney, medical personnel and police was intrusive and very frightening to young children," said Carmel Police Department Chief Don Fuselier.

As a result, 21 Monterey County agencies will work together through CART, which is based at the Sally P. Archer Child Advocacy Center at Natividad Medical Center in Salinas. State-of-the-art facilities will enable investigators to talk to children in a home-like setting, according to Fuselier.

Rooms are set up with one-way glass and the child interviews are video and audio taped, so those with a need to learn about the child abuse can do it without further traumatizing the child with repeated interviews.

More than 6,600 suspected cases of child abuse were reported in the county last year. Fuselier said, "We have a very, very small percentage of cases here in Carmel, but one is too many. This is one of those things we hope we never use, but if we need it, it's wonderful that this procedure and protocol are in place."

Kids' art helps

The $50,000 seed money for the center, donated by Shreve Archer, Jr. in memory of his wife Sally, was set up by Carmel pediatrician Shreve Archer III who wanted a place where evidence in child abuse cases could be gathered in the most expert way possible.

"If you don't get a conviction in these cases, a child is likely to be returned to the person who abused them," Archer said.

Dr. Archer asked All Saints' Day School art teacher Peter Hiller if his students would help decorate the center, "so that when kids came in who were having tough times, they would have something familiar to look at that would ease the tension," Hiller said. "I think I said yes before he even finished describing the project."

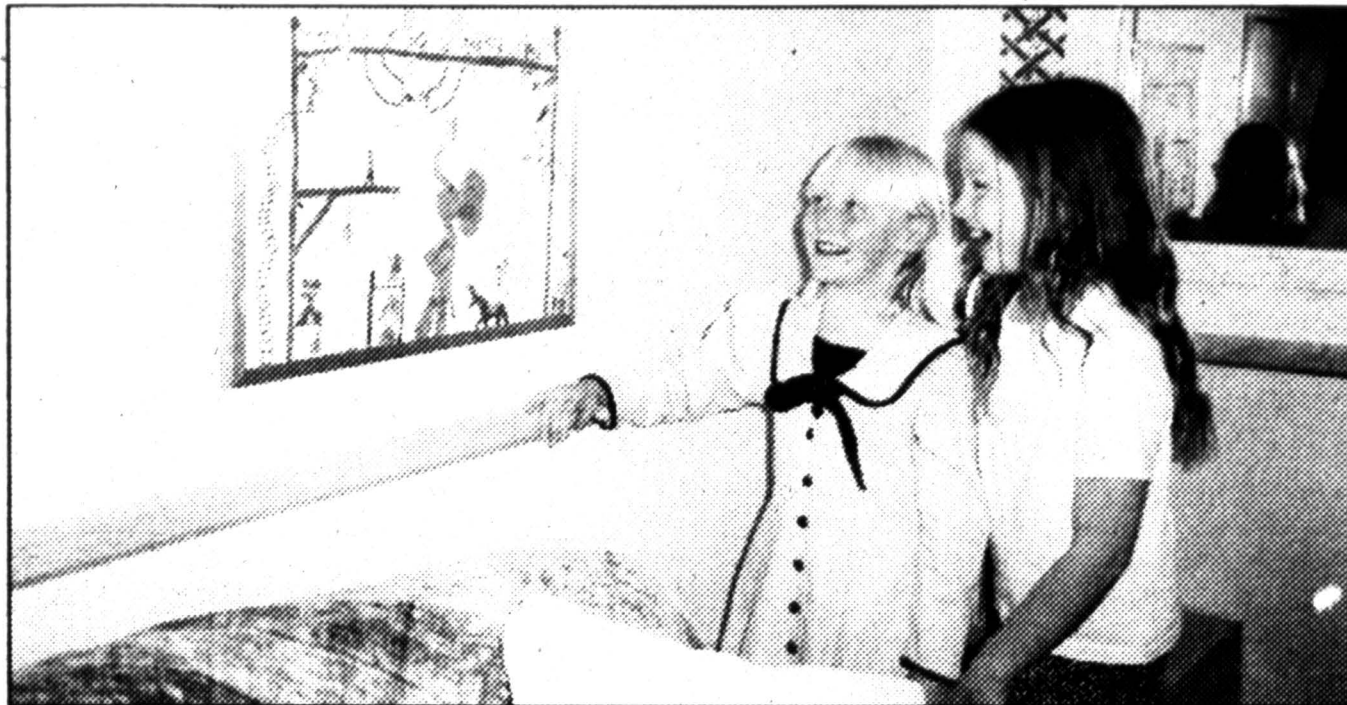

Hiller enlisted his fourth and fifth grade students. "These kids still create the fun and whimsical child-like art that would be most appropriate for kids who might be going in there," he said.

A benefit of the project, he said, was that it allowed him to discuss a tough topic. "It gave us an opportunity to talk about a very poignant and difficult subject," he said. "To discuss it in a time of non-crisis was really a plus for us."

The children created artwork in a variety of mediums and styles: abstract and realistic drawings, paintings, collages and even some wood sculptures. "It was a wonderful opportunity for kids to do something for kids," he said.

And Hiller wasn't the only one to think so — the students received the Children and Youth Award from the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Monterey County and a Certificate of Recognition from Senator Bruce McPherson. They now hang on the art room wall, as a reminder that a simple project by artistic kids can help lighten the load on the shoulders of those not so fortunate.

ticating pronouncing the names before I decided to attend my first meeting of the Carmel Orchid Society. I knew that someone would ask what orchids I had in my home. I wanted to sound reasonably intelligent and say I have a lovely white phalaenopsis which blooms constantly. I was very proud and surprised that it has survived and seemed to be thriving under my care. For certain, I was anxious to branch out to others types of orchids, but how could I ask about them when I could not remember those multi-syllable names!

It happened at that first meeting, exactly as I had known it would. Just as we took seats for the lecture on paphiopedilums, the woman to my left turned and inquired, "And what orchids do you enjoy growing?" There it was, my opportunity to sound knowledgeable and feel confident with my newest passion. 'I have several of the frilly, no frilly, no fully . . .,' I stuttered. "Oh, you must have a phalaenopsis," she confirmed, rescuing me from my embarrassment. I nodded and smiled, re-lieved at being rescued from tripping over my own tongue and pleased to remove my foot from my mouth!

I still panic when I attempt to provide the name of the genera. But that does not slow down my avid interest in collecting orchids and understanding their care. This year when the free May Faire Orchid Show and Sale opens at the Crossroads Indoor Mall near Rio Road on Saturday and Sunday, May 1st and 2nd, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., I will be the first through the door. I will be listening to the lectures on orchid care, potting and asking questions. I will be enjoying the beauty of the displays of prizewinning orchids and be heady with their scent. I will enjoy the sculpture display provided by the Sculpture House and Garden and the unique varieties of orchids available from the 22 vendors. I will be tempted to purchase from each of the vendors to add to my growing collection of white, purple, red, yellow and striped orchids and I will not resist!

And if you see me there, I will be happy to direct you to someone who knows the names of each and every one!

THIRD ANNUAL CARMEL GARDEN SHOW COMES TO QUAIL LODGE

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

A THREE-day exhibition of garden design and lifestyle presentations in outdoor pavilions will embellish the lawns at Carmel's Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday, April 30 to May 2.

The third annual Carmel Garden Show will feature displays and demonstrations of innovative gardening techniques and plant materials, interior and exterior room designs, ideas for imaginative entertaining, table top displays and al fresco cooking demonstrations.

Workshops and lectures are slated each day and the Monterey Bay Rose Society will host the 18th annual rose competition on Saturday and Sunday.

Tickets may be purchased for $12.50 each day, two-day passes are $22.50 and three-day passes $35. For ticket information, call 626-2478.

Headliner presentations by experts in entertaining, garden design and floral arranging are each $15 extra.

Separate two-hour tours of three Carmel gardens will be conducted each day for $15 which does not include entrance to the garden show.

Reservations must be made in advance by calling 625-1954.

Quail Lodge Resort is located at 8205 Valley Greens Drive, off Carmel Valley Road.

I Cantori make music this weekend at Carmel Mission

I CANTORI di Carmel, under the direction of Sal Ferrantelli, will present two performances, each featuring the Haydn "Missa in temore belli," or "Mass in Time of War," and Mendelssohn's "Psalm '95.'" Both pieces will be presented in concert with Ensemble Monterey, under the direction of Dr. John Anderson. The program will also feature two a capella motets.

Concerts start at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, May 1-2, in the Carmel Mission Basilica.

Tickets, $15 general, $20 reserved, are available at the Thunderbird Bookstore, Bay Books, Bookmark and Bookworks, or by calling 655-0869.

SUPERB FRENCH FARE DISPENSED AT CHEZ CHRISTIAN

DISCOVERING CHEF Christian Viollaz's Chez Christian in explorations of Carmel-by-the-Sea's hidden byways and courtyards, visitors must be enchanted to find this romantic little restaurant which seats only 35.

Could a small French restaurant possibly find a more enticing location than the charming, sequestered recesses of the Court of the Golden Bough on Ocean between Lincoln and Monte Verde?

An equally intriguing access — from Monte Verde up a flight of steps above an inn's parking lot — is generally known only to Carmelites or visitors who happen upon it by chance.

Looking in the half-open Dutch door or peering in its window, one sees only two tables; the other 10 are found after one enters, walking by the kitchen pass-through to the restaurant proper.

The larger dining room is made to appear more so by a mirror that covers three-quarters of the far wall. The attractive room looks out onto another area of the court.

Even the subdued and inviting guitar music with a samba beat that greeted us as we entered Chez Christian last Sunday evening sounded French — possibly because of the mood created by the general ambiance and wonderful aromas coming from the kitchen.

Maitre d' Mark Fineron, who is in charge of the front of the house aided only by the attentive busser, Rene, takes care of all diners with assurance, friendliness and familiarity with the ingredients and preparation of Chef Christian's offerings.

Pâté procedure

In the kitchen, Chef Christian prepares each order to order. Our request for an appetizer course of pâté de campagne ($5.75) was served with a covered basket of warm French bread just after a glass of Bordeaux Chateau Font Villac 1996, St. Emilion ($7.25/glass, $55/fifth) arrived — the glass slightly warm, the wine at room temperature, allowing it to breathe and flower nicely.

In an interview with Chef Christian the following day, we learned that the coarsely textured pâté is made with a chunky mixture of 24-hour marinated duck liver and some pork shoulder to which seasonings, vegetables, bread crumbs, egg and white wine are added. The mixture is put through a grinder, using the course blade, adding some pork fat to lessen the dryness. It's cooked in a bain marie for 90 minutes and then cooled before serving.

Two generous slices of the pâté were served at room temperature over red leaf lettuce, accompanied with cornichons, slices of tomato and a little crock of Dijon mustard. The texture and flavors were perfect with the Bordeaux: an exciting start to a very fine dinner.

Other appetizers, from $4.25 to $8.75, include soups, salads, a gulf prawn cocktail, escargots and broiled Roma tomatoes, goat cheese in olive oil and herbs.

If you like a pasta course — either as a first or main course — there are four to choose from (one of them vegetarian), accompanied with soup or salad, from $11.75 to $14.75.

Seafood gratin

Our main course was seafood gratin ($17.25), served in the fireproof oval gratin dish in which it was baked, incorporating crab meat, scallops, bay shrimp, sand dabs and salmon. During our interview we learned that Christian sautées the sand dabs and Atlantic salmon, placing the fish in a gratin dish. In the pan, he then incorporates the other seafood, cream, crumbs, onions, chopped scallions, tomato and garlic, then deglazes the pan, pouring all over the sautéed fish. The mixture is topped with whipping cream and bread crumbs before it is baked.

With the seafood we requested a white wine, Ecco Domani Pinot Grigio, 1997 ($6 the glass, $22.50/fifth) from the Italian Veneto region. (The label specified Venezia, but I don't recall ever seeing a vineyard along the canals or in the campi of my favorite city where one seldom sees even a garden plot uncobbled).

Generally, Pinot Grigio is crisp and dry. The Ecco Domani had a rather high residual sugar, which disappointed. Our fault. The wine list offers many other excellent choices, primarily from California and France, but some from Italy, New Zealand, Bulgaria

Play's 17th century insights parallel modern concerns

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

STAFF PLAYERS Repertory Company closes its '98 - '99 season with Molière's lively comedy, "The Imaginary Invalid." Director Nick Hovick does his magic on the tiny stage at the Indoor Forest Theatre with a cast of some of this area's best and most durable actors.

It is believed that Molière saw only four performances of his play before his death in 1673, at the age of 51. Though he was sickly and a bit of a hypochondriac himself, let us hope he died laughing at his own satirical work and for getting his last digs in at 17th century practitioners of medicine, whom he obviously abhorred and distrusted.

Molière's invalid-hero — or at least, his protagonist — is Argan, played here with great zest and confidence by veteran actor Ron Cohen. Argan is, paradoxically, a dominating, robust hypochondriac in an obsessive search for perfect health. In his quest, and to assure himself constant care by a physician, any physician, he is determined to force his unwilling daughter, Angelique, played by Christa Hobson, into marriage with the lunkheaded young physician, Thomas Diaforus (Julian Framstad who, by the way, is a refreshing and talented new face on our stages).

Argan is attended, pampered, suffered, and ridiculed by his less-than-adoring female household which includes his daughter Angelique and a second daughter, Louison (Celeste Holz), a wife, Beline (Lani Hudelson), a most astute sister, Mademoiselle Beralde (Neva Hahns, who notes that "Most men die of their enemies . . . not their diseases") and a delightfully robust maid-servant, Toinette, played by Lavelle Brown.

This cast is joined by Angelique's fawning suitor, Cleante (Matt Bower), the pompous and avaricious Dr. Diaforus (Peter

'Essence of Zen' workshop offered at Cherry Center for the Arts

ED BROWN, the best-selling author of "Tassajara Cooking" and "Tomato Blessings and Radish Teachings," will present a workshop in Zen meditation on Saturday, May 8th from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

Through talks, discussion, stories and short periods of meditation, Ed Brown will explore the heart and mind of traditional Zen practice. Presented by the Monterey Bay Zen Center, the workshop, "Coming Home to Your Heart," will include instruction in Soto Zen meditation, walking meditation and mindful awareness in daily life. "We'll focus on shifting from control to compassion, from 'hard-mind' to 'soft-mind,'" Brown says.

Ed Brown has been practicing Zen since 1965 and was ordained by Tassajara founder Shunryu Suzuki-Roshi in 1971. The author of several cookbooks, Brown leads cooking and meditation workshops locally and nationally.

Workshop fee of $50 includes vegetarian lunch. Reservations and information: 624-7491, or 659-

FASHION GIRLS STEP INTO SPRING

I AM in a dark room. A dozen or so people are sitting in a circle. I stand up and begin speaking.

"Hi. My name is Sissi; and I am a chocoholic. I admitted a year ago that I was powerless over my chocolate addiction and that my life — and weight — had become unmanageable because of this. Since then, I have managed to control my urges and survive a chocolate-deprived existence.

Until the evening of April 24th.

On that evening, at 8:25, I passed through the doors of the Monterey Museum of Art and entered the deep dark dungeon of my downfall, known as "The Eighth Chocolate Dance Extravaganza."

I initially walked by table after table covered with every version of chocolate dessert known to the devil's chef. And ignored it all.

Just as I began feeling proud over the proof of my chocoholic recovery, I saw, in the distance, what was going to be my fateful Apple of the Garden of Eve: it was an oversized chocolate teacup, lined with tiny, adorable chocolate cups filled with chocolate mousse.

I reached out for a single deceptively harmless-looking cup, placed it in my mouth, and was lost.

"My name is Sissi and I'm a chocoholic."

I sit down again, with my head bowed.

Mother's Day Sunday, May 9th

PacRep's Stephen Moorer entertains Dance Kids board member Valerie Kazansky at the 'Ghosties' reception.

Windsor acted as very charming bartenders while guests admired the creations from Harriet Duncan in Carmel.

All in all, for Barbara Livingston's first meeting as a new member, it was a great start!

■ Hank Ketcham wows 'em in Los Angeles

Our Pebble Beach boy had quite a line-up applauding him on April 17th, at Every Picture Tells A Story Gallery in Los Angeles.

A wonderful display of his work, appropriately titled "From Menace to Matisse," drew an illustrious crowd, telegrams of well-wishers which included Presidents Clinton, Ford and Bush, and the presentation of various awards.

The guests included original "Dennis" Jay North who flew in from Florida, actor Hal Linden, former local Ann Anka, race car driver Danny Sullivan and Melanie Bellon, director of community relations for our Community Hospital which displays Hank's work.

We're real proud of you, Hank!

■ Symphony benefit draws dazzling crowd

Let's face it: We're not exactly New York or Paris for our formal fashion concerns. So imagine my shock when I saw not one, not two — but many truly magnificently dressed women at the April 23rd benefit for the Friends of the Monterey Symphony, "Artists in Concert," at Quail Lodge.

First Prize for "Coolest Outfit of the Evening" (??) Auction co-chair Jean Mahoney, whose ensemble consisted of a long sequined black jacket over a simple white shirt — and black leather pants. I call that "major" sexy and cool.

First Prize for "The Most Stylish Accessory" goes to LaVonna Corzine for her one-of-a-kind evening hat that definitely screamed "Paris"! By the way, that evening she was also offering her home as a very special auction item for a dinner party.

As for knockout evening gowns, I don't dare mention any names for fear of leaving any deserving one out.

On the humor front, Dr. June Dunbar couldn't help wryly observing that at least one painter whose artwork was being auctioned off, had his mother's appendix removed by her. Hubby Dr. John Phillips later got caught up in — and won — a bidding war for a dinner hosted at the fabulous Highlands residence of Mr. & Mrs. George Pysor.

Jean Duff looked radiant ... probably because she had nothing to do there (for once) except to have fun. With her volunteer work, occasions like this are few and far between. The tireless Bill Bates was having fun with caricaturing guests for the sake of symphony donations. When are we going to canonize him?

And last but not least, Suzanne and Steve Diamond looked none the worse for so far surviving the "wee bit" of controversy regarding their Carmel property co-ownership of a potential Longs site.

■ Dance Kids' Ghosties brings together kids & grownups

Dance Kids' spring production of "Ghosties!" was kicked off by a reception at the Golden Bough Playhouse on April 24th.

Dolores Gunia was hubby-less since Steve was — as usual — playing bartender, this time at Monterey's Museum of Art. Walt de Faria, who had written the lyrics and book for the production, seemed as energized as always by his work with kids. "They keep you young," he explained.

Jean and Carmel Mayor Ken White brought their grandson Gary Michael Todd to enjoy the show, though I suspect Ken was going to have just as much fun ...

PacRep's director Stephen Moorer was accompanied by his wife Julie and 22-month-old daughter Claire. I bet mother and daughter have Stephen wrapped around their fingers, given their bewitching aqua-blue eyes ...

And as usual, Carol Benton Richmond was looking beautiful, glamorous and in control, despite the fact that she had directed the production. Not a hair out of place ... how does she do it???

and Australia. Ports, domestic beers and a non-alcoholic beer are available, too.

There are 12 other truly tempting entrées — from frog legs, sweetbreads, breast of duck — to filet mignon and rack of lamb and lots in between. They range from $13.50 to $19.75.

Desserts include standard delicious treats generally found in a French restaurant: Crème caramel, crêpes, crème brûlée, pear belle Hélène, fresh fruit tart, as well as ice cream with sauce and mango sorbet. Being good as gold, we had the mango sorbet ($3.50) with a cup of excellent Illy espresso ($2.25).

All the way from Evian

Christian, who was born and raised in Evian-les-Bains — where he apprenticed at a large spa/resort — continued as a line cook in a Swiss restaurant in Geneva before coming to the Monterey Peninsula. Summoned by an Evian friend working here, he was told of a job opening. The very next day Christian flew to California, intending to stay for just a few months. Fourteen years later, Christian is still here, now in the 10th year of running his own restaurant.

Christian told us he never grows tired of cooking. "It's the best job in the world because for me, food and wine are about life."

And so is dining at Chez Christian, we might add.

Eberhardt), Monsieur Purgon (Tricia Wayne), and the delightfully devious Notary, portrayed by Jeff Hudelson.

While Molière's 17th century plays are comedic observations of his times, their universal appeal today is that their themes seem to find common parallels with our own. To paraphrase Director Hovick's more erudite parallels between Molière's assessment of 17th century medicine and our own obsession with good health, medicine, treatment, and diet today, we might say — as far as our attitudes toward our health and the medical profession are concerned, "The more things change, the more they remain the same."

For a period piece such as this, costuming is all important. Loel Shuler is to be complimented for her attention to authentic detail.

Make your reservations for "The Imaginary Invalid" early. The evening we attended, the hall was packed to the aisles... and small wonder for this outstanding cast and performance.

What's happening this month in and around the Monterey Peninsula's historic waterfront

Restaurant Row Mother's Day Buffet at the Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa

REMEMBER THE TASTE of warm chocolate chip cookies – and who baked them for you? Remember who bandaged your skinned knees, and who came to your room at 3 am when you had bad dreams? Chances are, it was Mom. And whether it was the Mom you were born to, or a stepmom, or aunt, or grandma, this "Mom" was there for you when you needed her. She taught you right from wrong, picked you up when you fell, dusted you off and put you in the right direction. She holds a special place in your heart.

Mother's Day provides an excellent chance to show your special Mom how much you appreciate her – and the Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa provides an excellent venue for your Mother's Day celebration. From 10am to 3pm the Carmel Ballroom will feature a beautifully displayed buffet with four specialty stations, a hot buffet, and a cold buffet. Chefs will carve roast Angus New York and honey baked ham to order; Australian lamb chops and roasted stuffed breast of chicken will also be offered as main dishes.

Custom-made omelettes will be available for those desiring breakfast; quiche Lorraine, sugar-cured bacon, breakfast potatoes and the Plaza's delicious chicken sausage will be included among other breakfast specialties. Enjoy plenty of fresh seafood—from shrimp and oysters, sushi, seafood salads and smoked salmon, to an elegant grilled arctic char with oven-dried pineapple salsa. The vegetable selections are numerous, and will include artichoke salad with roasted red pepper and feta cheese, caesar salad, Carmel Valley tomato salad, grilled yellow potatoes with red onions and thyme, and couscous with English peas, baby onions, and parsley.

Guest will dine on these delicious choices in the Monterey Bay Ballroom, which will be decorated in all its seasonal splendor. Pastel roses will fill this ocean view room, and the gentle sounds of classical music will set the tone for this special day. And if all this weren't enough, the Plaza's talented pastry Chef will set a dessert display that's sure to impress even the most discerning Mother.

Treat your special lady to a special celebration, and let the friendly, professional staff of the Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa pamper you at this year's Mother's Day Champagne Brunch Buffet. A special gift will be presented to all Mothers attending the buffet.

The Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa is located at 400 Cannery Row, Monterey. Please call 646-1706 for reservations, menus or further information. The Mother's Day Buffet cost is $36 for adults, and half price for children under 12. Valet parking is complimentary for buffet guests.

May Day on the Row

CANNERY ROW - Monterey. Cannery Row celebrates the arrival of our summer season on "America's Most Famous Street" with another "Race Night on the Row," Saturday, May 1st, honoring Laguna Seca's "Honda Challenge Of Laguna Seca" Ama National Superbike Races Championship Races. Cannery Row's partnership with Laguna Seca Raceway will again feature a street closure to vehicular traffic on Saturday night, between Hoffman and David Avenues. The street will be open to motorcycles only for cruising and parking in another spectacular "Race Night on Cannery Row."

This Cannery Row celebration of Monterey Peninsula's racing tradition at Laguna Seca is free and open to the public and will feature two bands, motorcycle exhibits and merri-ment guaranteed to entrance the crowds of race fans attending the races at Laguna Seca earlier in the day, as well as throngs of local residents who come down to the Row to enjoy the awesome spectacle of hundreds of historic to "track ready" cycles parked the length of the street.

The bayside Steinbeck Plaza (Prescott & Cannery Row) will feature rock and boogie music by "Juke Box." At the plaza of the El Torito Mexican Restaurant (Hoffman & Cannery Row) more entertainment will be provided by the "Broadway Blues Band."

Cycles on Cannery Row

Calling All "Row Rats"

Cannery Row's corps of volunteers (known as "Row Rats") for public projects and events like "Race Night on Cannery Row" are seeking additional volunteers interested in helping stage events open to the public on the Row. Hard work, camaraderie, and special perks from Cannery Row businesses and restaurants help make the jobs--such as marshalls, vehicle control, communications, traffic barricade monitors-- important jobs that you can really have a good time at. New "Row Rat" volunteers can contact 648-8132 for more information. You, too, can be a "Row Rat."

Now that summer has officially arrived, remember there's always something happening on Cannery Row. Come down and enjoy all that "America's Most Famous Street" has to offer.

Mario Flores returns to the Jazz & Blues

Mario Flores Quintet

Company for a great evening of Latin and Afro-Cuban jazz. His appearance last July 4 was highly enjoyable, as conga player Flores and his band captivated the audience with their hot rhythms. Flores has been influenced by the music of Tito Puente, Cal Tjader, Chano Pozo, and Mongo Santamania. In over twenty years of playing music, Flores has performed with Pete Escovedo, Bobby McFerrin, Clare Fisher and others, and currently has released a CD called Chilipin. Don't miss what is sure to be a wonderful celebration of Cinco de Mayo.

Ron Escheté Trio

Sat.
May 8

AND SPECIAL GUEST JAN DENAU - Guitarist
Ron Escheté has been playing in the Los Angeles area for years. He has taught guitar at the Guitar Institute in Hollywood, and plays a seven-string guitar that enables him to play both melody and chords simultaneously. His most recent recordings have been with the Gene Harris Quintet, vocalist Mary Stallings, and his own CD Mo' Strings Attached, available on the Jazz Alliance label. His long-time friend and local pianist Jan Denau will join Escheté. Denau plays regularly at Spanish Bay and the Monterey Hyatt, and stylistically is influenced by Errol Garner. This will no doubt be an evening of some tasty playing and classic jazz.

Jon Mayer Trio

Sat.
May 15

Pianist and composer Jon Mayer played in New York City in the late '50s and '60s playing with Kenny Dorham, Pete LaRoca, Jackie McLean and John Coltrane. He also played with Chet Baker, Sarah Vaughan, and led the Manhattan Transfer band for a time. After 12 years hiatus from the music scene, Mayer is back in the swing of things. Mayer likens his playing to a mixture of Red Garland, Bill Evans, Erroll Garner, and Wynton Kelly, with a solid blues foundation. Stanley Naftaly, in the February issue of Jazz Now, finds Mayer's playing "exciting, passionate, and perfectly centered," so don't miss the opportunity to hear this re-emerging talent. His recent recording on A-Records featuring Ernie Watts is entitled Do It Like This, and it recently received critical acclaim in Downbeat magazine.

"The Absolutely Fabulous Throw" kit (mentioned in an earlier column) is a beautiful home decorator item, with different colors as well as shiny and fuzzy fabrics in each kit. Joan says it's fun to make and quite a conversation piece! And then there's an extremely simple hat and sweater kit for the newborn, ideal for a beginning knitter, under $20; and a kit called "The Hot Toddler Sock", up to age 3, in two colors, orange and red, blue and white - nice and easy! Oh, and Gift certificates for Mom right here! 529 central, PG. 647-9276.

The Elegant Set

If you like elegance, THE ELEGANT SET is your cup of tea! And most especially now with the arrival of a large selection of beautiful bridge cloths and table toppers for all size tables - 34, 42, 50 and 68 square inches. And these beautiful handmade cloths with lovely artwork and embroidery are fabulously priced, starting at $18! This is no doubt due to economic problems in Asia, but whatever the cause, think Mother's Day and feel most fortunate! It's suggested, however, not to wait too long - such "buys" go rather quickly! Hurry then to the corner of San Carlos & 7th, Carmel. 625-6080.

catherine's is a place to feast your eyes! Stunning outfits that require immediate arrival, if you're smart! Among them, three-piece outfit in an unforgettable blueish/gray shade. Pants with set-in waist band (elastic in back), great fit; blouse with charming overlapping Peter Pan collar that buttons in back, 3/4 sleeves; and a duster with nice details such as a slit up back, trimmed pockets and one beguiling heart-shaped pewter button! Accessories are just as unusual - dangling earrings as light as air; copy watches of Gucci, Calvin Klein, Cartier for under $50 - and of course, Gift Certificates! 405 Calle Principal, Monterey. 646-1565.

For the sake of your family's health, do you realize one answer lies right under your feet? Yes, the carpet and furniture in your home can contain dust, soil, bacteria and many other contaminants that could cause trouble and require professional care.

THE BELMONT METHOD is the obvious and perfect solution. After all, with 49 years of experience and thousands of satisfied customers, don't you agree that says it all? Just call 625-3242 for a free estimate and find out for yourself!

You know, I'm sure, the HAND MADEN, that marketplace of sewing, has a new owner. Yes, Jean Graham has taken over and things already seem bigger and better - if possible! Here, under one roof is absolutely everything you could possibly need for sewing or handwork of any kind (except knitting/crocheting)! It is a spectacle - with seemingly no end of fabrics, notions, patterns, buttons, etc. stretched out before you. To say nothing of the Viking sewing machines that embroider with the touch of a button or two. There'll be several classes in June, but don't wait. Come see it all now! 620 Lighthouse Ave. (at 17th), PG. 373-5353.

STARRS, called one of the best women's clothing stores on the peninsula in a recent Coast Weekly poll, hopes you'll discover it soon. That is if you haven't already found this new shop of easygoing, fun, comfortable clothes. Starr has just unpacked loads of spring and summer things - all kinds of sundresses, the newest version of the popular peasant blouse, jeans, camisoles and linen separates to name only a few. And oh, yes, she's now offering something else unusual - custom-made hats! I think you'll agree with that poll! Dolores, betw. Ocean & 7th, Carmel. 622-9755.

Prim & Proper

Want to really please her? It's simple and here's how. Just pick up one, or maybe two, of the many basic cotton cardigans at PRIM & PROPER! They come in a myriad of colors with either v-neck or crew neck, by Foxcroft, Chelsea Garden, Alps, just right for a cool evening and oh, so easily washed! Or maybe she'd prefer a Shetland wool? You might look at the many shirtwaist dresses that she would live in - missy (6-18) or petite, 2-16 sizes by Willi. And along with the complimentary gift wrapping, this task becomes no task at all! 553 Lighthouse, PG. 372-5563.

They say they bring people and nature together...and they do. I'm speaking of Jerry and Beth Hatcher and their WILD BIRDS UNLIMITED in the Crossroads. Obviously serious lovers of birds for many years, listen to them for 10 minutes and you're one, too! They not only can provide you with bird feeders, bird houses, bird seed, bird books, bird maps, but can advise the best birdhouse or feeder for your yard or patio, even the plants and shrubs that will help to attract birds. If you're already a lover of birds, remember this shop for all bird-needs or if you're ready for a fascinating new hobby, come here! 149 The Crossroads, Carmel. 620-1955.

Christine Warren's

BOUTIQUE

With Mother in mind - as always, of course - but especially now, walk into CHRISTINE WARREN'S BOUTIQUE for that special inspiration. You'll find no end of truly unique ideas such as the favorite Flax line. Take good long looks at the faceted fashion dresses with matching "slipstir", and the Sarah Arizona spring ribbon sweaters with reversible floral printed long and lovely skirts. Also by Flax for children, adorable linen/ rayon jumpers with matching jackets in variegated black/white and blue/white - sizes 4 to 10. Excellent prices, too! 309 Forest, PG. 655-3666.

Don't want to sound like a broken record, but Russell is challenging us again to unearth an old camera - a Leica (any year), or a pre-1964 Nikon, Canon, Hasselblad, Linhof or Contax! There's money in them he says, cause they could be worth hundreds if not thousands of dollars. He suggests checking closets, attics, memories, family members far and wide. When you find something, report to him immediately! He's fairly certain there are plenty of Leicas around due to a Leica camera shop on Ocean Avenue years ago. So you'd be smart to rummage away! THE LEVIN GALLERY, 408 Calle Principal, Monterey. 649-1166.

Are you a member of the Human Race? If so, call 655-9234 to walk along the bike path from Lover's Point - May 8, 8:30am - sharp! Or the 10K sanctioned run - 9am - sharp! Volunteer Center of Monterey County.

Call CHOMP about Cancer Survivors' Day, 1999 - a June 12 celebration. 625-4753.

Big Sur Biker Blues Festival this weekend

By STEVE VAGNINI

THE FIRST Annual Big Sur Biker Blues Festival kicks off at 9 p.m. Friday, April 30 at the Fernwood Resort with an evening of rock 'n' blues featuring Monterey blues quartet the Next Blues Band. Weekend entertainment includes a wealth of Central Coast blues bands including headliners Steve Freund, Chris Cain, Corby Yates and Mighty Mike Schermer.

Steve Freund, a member of numerous Chicago blues bands including that of the late Chicago blues patriarch Sunnyland Slim, performs on Sunday afternoon. Freund, guitarist for the Boz Scaggs Band, was recently signed to a record deal and his solo career appears ready to take flight. Chris Cain, a Monterey favorite, has seen a major resurgence in his career since having written the original blues music score for "Thunder Knocking on the Door: A Bluesical Tale of Rhythm and the Blues" for the San Jose Repertory Theatre.

Mike Schermer, founding member of the Soul Drivers and guitarist for Angela Strehli, makes his debut festival performance with his own band.

Youth will also be represented by a host of young blues bands including the acclaimed Corby Yates, as well as Carmel's own Storm Warning and The Blue Tones. A host of other talented groups are scheduled to perform including the debut performance of the Rose of Sharon Project featuring vocalist Tim Culbertson. Tickets: 667-2422.

Idaho native Rosalie Sorrells is a folksinger and a storyteller who uses music to advance her story. She has been called the original "Highway Woman" and she was immortalized by Nanci Griffith in her song "Ford Econoline."

She appears at Carleton Hall on Franklin Street in Monterey at 8 p.m. Friday, April 30. Tickets are $15 in advance and $17 at the door. Call 373-7379.

"Carmel Legends"

Vol. 29

We keep a little file of legends which we wish had happened. But didn't. Among them is the non-visit to Carmel of SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN on July 24, 1885. He had come from London to New York to conduct The Mikado, to fight against piracy of Gilbert and Sullivan operas in the States, and principally to visit the children of his deceased brother in Los Angeles! His train journey from New York to San Francisco took 9 days, including stops in Chicago, Iowa, Denver, Salt Lake City, Salt Lake City and Sacramento. Of Iowa he wrote: "No liquors to be sold in this state. Shall not dine in Iowa." He hated the food in Lincoln, Nebraska; he played the organ in Denver's opera house; repeated that impromptu recital at the Mormon Tabernacle; visited Chinatown and Alcatraz in San Francisco; and took the overnight train 428 miles to L.A. Presumably he by-passed Carmel in the night, probably a few miles inland. We are distressed that he lacked a better guide, especially because he did visit Madera, Fresno and Yosemite during his time in California. But maybe he was right: we had no opera, no Golden Bough, no Sunset Center, no Forest Theater in 1885. But what a difference he might have made in Carmel history! His "Pirates" might have operated from Carmel Bay instead of Penzance!

CHRISTMAS HITS THE Y

By MARY BROWNFIELD

This room, pictured before the work was done, was one of many to get spiffed up, courtesy of Christmas in April.

LIKE A whirlwind, hundreds of volunteers converged on the YMCA to brighten up its dingy interior April 24. Carmelites were among the army of workers who renovated the Y for this year's incredible Christmas in April.

"We think it's an act of God," YMCA Executive Director Laura Kelly said. "We have many projects that have been neglected, so this couldn't have come at a better time."

According to Christmas in April chapter President David Wells, 300 volunteers committed themselves to a day's hard work at the YMCA. Many sponsors, including the Slaughterback Corporation and World Savings, encouraged employees to come out en masse, he said.

On tap for the 1940s-era military building were new paint, floors, ceilings and light fixtures throughout. The kitchen, which Carmel Valley's Jim Dunn said probably had not been touched since 1942, was gutted. It now sports a "restaurant-quality kitchen," complete with stainless steel sinks, a huge gas range and other amenities.

The YMCA project was the first of its kind for this chapter. "We usually do homes for people who are physically or financially unable to do it themselves," Wells said.

Christmas in April primarily funds its projects, which usually cost between $5,000 and $7,000, through donations, he said. The group also renovated one house in Pacific Grove, three in Seaside and one in Salinas on April 24.

Wells estimated the cost of work on the Y between $25,000 and $30,000. He said, "This is a very unusual project for us, but that's not to say it will be the only one we ever do."

City looks at merged lot bonuses

IN AN effort to increase the incentives for property owners to provide more open space in town, the Carmel City Council will look at a proposal that would grant an extra 10 percent of floor area ratio to homeowners who agree to merge small lots.

At the upcoming meeting May 2, the council will decide whether to forward such a proposal to the Carmel Planning Commission.

City Councilwoman Sue McCloud asked the council to look at the proposal after a property owner introduced the idea at the March council meeting.

"The idea is for someone who has two 40-foot lots to combine them into one legal lot (with one house) instead of two houses on two lots," McCloud said.

Prime Ocean Avenue location goes to gallery

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

ONE OF DOWNTOWN Carmel's best retail locations, which the Pebble Beach Co. wanted for an upscale clothing and souvenir shop, will instead become the Trajan Fine Arts gallery, building manager Jody LeTowt said last week.

The gallery will be owned by partners Oliver Caldwell and Susan Snyder, whose company operates successful galleries in San Francisco and in New York's SoHo district.

"It's just a wonderful opportunity that this location became available," said Caldwell, who lives in San Francisco. The Trajan Gallery will feature the works of contemporary European artists who are not well known in the United States.

"We will be a little less traditional and a little more challenging than other Carmel galleries," he said.

In January the city council rejected on a 3 to 2 vote an effort by the Pebble Beach Co. to open one of its signature retail stores in the 2,200-square-foot space. Trajan Gallery does not need a special permit to open in the same location.

Pebble Beach Executive Vice President Mark Stilwell confirmed that the company was abandoning its efforts to open a store in the former Dick Bruhn building.

"We are studying our options for other locations in Carmel," Stilwell said.

The large Bruhn clothing stores closed last year and the building at the corner of San Carlos and Ocean, owned by the Goold family, has been extensively remodeled and divided into six retail spaces.

In addition to the new Trajan Gallery, which will be open in mid-June, two well-known Carmel businesses, African Odyssey and At Home, have moved into the building and will soon be joined by Bittner Fine Stationery.

Carmel Music Boxes — long a fixture on Ocean Avenue — will double the size of its store by expanding into the adjacent Bruhn building. One retail space remains unrented, LeTowt said.

Meanwhile, the souvenir shop license — which had belonged to Crazy Shirts at its location across the street from the Bruhn Building and which the Pebble Beach Company sought to use — now belongs to a Phoenix clothing store chain, Sergeant Leisure, which will soon open in place of Crazy Shirts.

After months of back-and-forth negotiations and several public hearings about the Pebble Beach Co. bid to open a store in his building, LeTowt said he was especially disappointed at the "atrocious and outrageous" things that were said about the P.B. Co. at the January city council meeting.

"Unfortunately, certain members of the city council and most members of the planning commission respond to emotional presentations of citizens who are inclined to be against most things if not everything," LeTowt said.

Longs would be good for residents

Dear Editor:

Chain stores are bad. They unfairly compete with local businesses. They certainly aren't Carmel-ish. So we must vigorously denounce the proposed Longs in downtown Carmel. Right?

When I was growing up in Carmel in the 1960s (and, Beverly, it was a great place to be a kid) Carmel's business district was anchored by two major chain stores. Purity, a small supermarket, was where the library annex and Piatti restaurant are today. Sprouse-Reitz, a variety store much like Longs, was on Ocean Avenue where Carumba and the Nature Company are now. When Sprouse-Reitz closed its doors around 1986 Carmel residents lamented the loss of that "Carmel institution" and appealed to the corporate headquarters to keep the store open! I must add that Neilsen's Market and other businesses opposing Longs outlasted the competition from Purity and Sprouse-Reitz.

Longs would fill the void left by Sprouse-Reitz. It would be a resident-serving business that would attract local shoppers to downtown. This could help, rather than hurt, other resident-serving stores nearby. By being near residential neighborhoods, many residents could walk to Longs instead of adding to the traffic around the Crossroads.

As someone who fondly remembers when downtown Carmel was a practical place to shop for everyday needs, I think Longs would be preferable to more cutesy boutiques or expensive art galleries supported mainly by tourists. It is ironic that those who are trying to protect Carmel traditions are fighting against the very type of business that once made it a viable shopping district for residents. If they don't want a chain store, they should develop their own proposal for a locally owned variety store in that building.

A shop that exemplifies Carmel

Dear Editor:

In capsulizing your fine paper, it's 1/3 town news, 1/3 fun & social and 1/3 real estate. In regards to the Longs Drug Store concern, I recall several weeks back that one of the possible tenants for the old Great Western Bank space was reported to be Renovations.

I have shopped in their Sherman Oaks Mall location and the shop exemplifies Carmel — dedicated to enhancing your real estate while dipping into preservation — a natural.

This is then stating the positive, rather than voicing the negative against Longs. And really, why do we need two Longs so close together anyway, no matter how they are merchandised?

Gary Girard, Carmel

Sierra Club on CWN

Dear Editor:

In the Pine Cone's April 23 article on the Sierra Club's lawsuit against Canada Woods North (CWN), Eastwood's representative Alan Williams is quoted as saying they "worked very hard to make Canada Woods North an environmentally sensitive project" and he thinks that the Sierra Club pursued the suit "not because of anything wrong with the project but because Eastwood makes a convenient target that increases donations to their war chest." While there is extensive public opposition to CWN, it is disingenuous of him to claim that we would choose to battle Mr. Eastwood's phalanx of attorneys and formidable public relations "machine" in hopes of raising more money than the cost of the lawsuit itself.

As for what is "wrong" with the project, the Ventana Chapter and many others expressed their concerns about this development. Among other things, CWN plans to take water from the depleted Carmel River. Taking this water for new connections increases dry-year and permanent demand on that resource, which is unwise environmentally.

The project is also a "sprawl" development, with houses, roads and golf course spread out over a large amount of land. One reason sprawl is opposed is because it fragments habitat and wildlife corridors. Instead of the development accommodating the environment (clustering it all to avoid bulldozing sensitive habitats like the Monterey Pine and rare native grasses) they instead expect the environment to accommodate the development. The Sierra Club believes that "mitigations" such as requiring permits to cut the trees and questionable replanting and relocating programs are not desirable environmentally. Avoidance of the habitat is.

In short, a legal project is not the same thing as an "environmentally sensitive" project.

Gillian Taylor, Chair, Ventana Chapter

'Good reasons' to oppose dam

Dear Editor:

Your editorial of April 16 had some good points and some with which I disagree. The headline "Don't look to Washington for Water Solutions" is right on target. Those solutions exist right here on the Monterey Peninsula. And I don't totally agree with the American Rivers report, although I haven't read it but I can only surmise from what I read in local publications that some of its points are justified.

As for the Carmel River being dry, "because of people who live here," that is partially true. But your readers should read Vida de Junipero Serra by Father Francisco Palou, Serra's successor. And Hubert Bancroft's seven volumes of History of California. They say that during the rainy season, the river ran high and oftentimes flooded, and during the summer season it dried up. It never ran all year long. Your editorial states that because of it running dry "... that is why some of this area's most ardent environmentalists support a new dam on the upper reaches of the Carmel River. They want the river flow restored because of its flora and fauna and see a new dam as the most cost-effective way to restore the river's health."

If that were true, why do some of the other "ardent environmentalists," such as the Sierra Club, the Steelhead Association and the National Marine Fisheries Service, oppose it?

You are partially correct when you say "opposition to the dam comes mainly from people who believe that a major new water source would foster rapid population growth." Certainly, that is one of the reasons. But another is because dams harm the environment. They're being demolished all over the U. S. They are hazardous to fish and other endangered inhabitants of rivers. Some believe the cost is too high; others have concerns that religious ceremonial grounds and sacred burial sites of the Esselen will be inundated.

Also, there are people who just don't want to have their water bills doubled strictly to legalize 10,730 acre feet of water the state claims Cal-Am is over pumping. If the demise of the Hatton Canyon freeway is any example, kiss the proposed dam goodbye. Those of us who really want to solve the problem and have a healthy river and adequate water propose to present alternatives to the dam which will not only be much less expensive but will do the very things which the Pine Cone is using as excuses to build the dam.

It might interest your readers to know that last month the water board voted to include in the EIR an option of increasing the yield of the dam to as much as 20,000 acre feet. Those who don't want the dam because — as you say, it will "foster rapid population growth" — have good reason to oppose it.

NO MORE WOOD WINDOW WOES

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ANN SOLON finally got her windows.

After a back-and-forth battle with the Carmel Planning Commission about requiring non-clad wood windows, the commission approved Solon's aluminum-clad wood windows.

"I'm your test subject on this process," Solon's architect, Marjorie Ingram, told the commission. "I'm glad to be here and have this opportunity." Solon's appeal is the first test of the commission's new Residential Window Standards, which it adopted on March 24.

"I love the house — it's got a good feel to it," Solon said in Wednesday's meeting. "I want to bring it back to its glory days. I would like it to remain an asset to the neighborhood, not something to just deteriorate."

Solon's home has more than 40 windows of varying shapes and sizes. She proposed replacing all of them with aluminum-clad wood windows. The low-gloss finished aluminum looks identical to wood from 10 feet away, Ingram said.

Although the windows met all of the commission's standards, Ingram said she was uncomfortable with saying they were "most appropriate to the architecture," as the standards demand. "It's my opinion," she said.

The commission approved Solon's appeal 5-1, with Commissioner Pope Coleman dissenting. He said, "I had hoped I would hear some reason why aluminum clad is more appropriate than the regular wood that is still being used by most people in town."
